The manufacturers have not yet signified their approval of the proposition, but it is believed that they will accept it rather than prolong the fight.

The police are still having difficulty with the strikers, and arrested a number of the women cloakmakers at Grand They attacked and abused the men who had been hired in their places as they were going to work, and some of them were very violent. Annu Letwitch was particularly bolsterous, and she attacked Michael Levi and pulled out a handful of his whiskers.

The strikers have pickets posted all along the street and the number of police in that vicinity was increased today. The strikers who over the nonunion ment employed in Meyer Gonossen's Grand street shops this morning, and they went out in a body.

Three women who were arrested yesterday were discharged to-day because the complainants against them failed to appear.

the complainants against them failed to appear.

There is a great deal of distress among the strikers and their families, but they remain firm and declare their determination to continue to the bitter and. There is very little defection among the strikers are and all the clonk manufactories are practically life, and retail dealers are clamoring for clonks which the manufacturers are not able to supply.

The season for making cloaks usually ends about Nov. 25, but if hands could be obtained it would be prolonged until January this year. One or two firms are supplying a limited number of high-priced garments only, and the working forces of these houses are employed day and night, but they cut very little figure in the trade.

The Manufacturers' Association met at the Metropolitan Hotel last night and resolved to continue the fight until the strikers are starved out.

All the labor unions in this city and vicinity have been appealed to for aid for the starving strikers.

Landlords who were promised rents by some of the cloakmakers after the election have not been paid, and many disponses notices have been issued.

Meyer Johasson, one of the largest cloak manufacturers in the city, salled for Europe yesterday with the avowed purpose of starting a factory in Berlin and sending the product of it to his New York nouse.

Schwartz is an employee of Friedman Brothers, contracting tailors of Broadway, New York. Yesterday he returned from work at noon. As he was passing up Eastern Parkway, near Thatford avenue, he was set upon by a mob of fully 200 strikers reinforced by the anarchist Brownsville, under the leadership of Sam Shapiro and Ravenositch, both well known to the police. Schwartz at first endeavored to elude the crowd, but this being impossible he frew a revolver and fired it in the air. hen picked up a balestick that happened to be lying in the street and tried to make a stand. The crowd pushed upon him, and in self-defense he struck Morcohen over the head. Jacob Scha-Rowitz, one of the leaders of the mob, was also struck by Schwartz. The crowd, however, soon proved too much for Schwartz, and he ran down Thatford avenue and took refuge in the house of a friend, Abraham Schneider.

much for Schwartz, and he ran down Thatford avenue and took refuge in the house of a friend, Abraham Schneider. The noise of the pistol shots attracted the attention of Policeman Stephen Garvey, of the Liberty avenue station, who forced his way through the crowd into Schneider's house, where he was told a man had been shot. He arrested Schwartz, and started to take him to the station-house. The moment he appared at the door he was met by a volley of stones, several of which struck the policeman on the head and body, nearly disabling him. Mounted Policeman Hall joined Garvey at this point, and between them they succeeded in getting Schwartz as far as the house of Engine No. 21, on Eastern Parkway. There they took refuge until the reserves from the station arrived.

Even then the crowd followed the patrol wagon, throwing stones and clubs, as far as the station on Liberty avenue.

A member of the firm of Friedman Bros. was also in Brownsville at the time and attempted to aid Schwartz. The mob set upon him, but he deemed discretion the better part of valor and fed.

Later in the atternoon practically the same crowd visited Schneider's house, where Schwartz had taken refuge, on Thatford avenue. They wrecked the front of the house, smashing all the windows and light woodwork. The life of Mrs. Schneider was threatened, and her only companion, a servant named Rachel Kaufman, was assaulted and quite seriously injured.

Mrs. Schneider also reports that she was waylaid several days ago by a crowd of women and stoned. She was suffering from these injuries when the mob surrounded the house yesterday.

A secret meeting of the Anarchists was held in the cellar of Metropolitan Saerger Hall, on Watkins street, owned by Abraham Barusch, at which the police were loudly denounced for their action in the afternoon. One of the most prominent speakers is alleged to have declared that they intended to have Capt. Bank closed its doors yesterday, and posted a notice that the suspension was due to lack of funds. The directors assert that the bank's depositors will not lose a dollar. They state that the withdrawai of large sums of money by a few heavy depositors, who had become alarmed by rumors that the bank was unsafe, brought on the failure. It is understood the cause of the failure of the bank originated in personal quarrels among its officers. President Joseph Brown says the bank will not resume business, but will go into liquidation. He says its assets are sufficient to pay all depositors in full and leave something to be distributed among the stockholders. The bank has a paid-up capital of $190.00, and when closed had deposits of about $20.00. Other banks in the city are not affected by the failure.
